Data protection information pursuant to Art. 13 GDPR - sample

Email: datenschutz@beispielmobil.invalid
Phone: +49 000 123456-0
Sample data protection officer contact: dsb@beispielmobil.invalid. All contact details are fictional.

2. What data are processed?

Depending on the booking and rental process, master data, contact data, driving-licence and identity-document data, booking and contract data, payment and billing data, vehicle and usage data, communication data and, in the event of claims, accident and damage data are processed.

Certain vehicles may generate technical vehicle data, for example mileage, charge level, warning messages or location data. In this example, location data are not used for general movement profiles, but only where required for expressly defined operational or security purposes, such as locating a vehicle after a theft report.

3. Purposes and legal bases

Booking and contract performance: processing reservations, identity and driving-licence checks, vehicle provision, billing and customer communication. Illustrative legal basis: Art. 6(1)(b) GDPR.

Legal obligations: compliance with commercial, tax or official obligations and processing lawful requests for information. Illustrative legal basis: Art. 6(1)(c) GDPR.

Legitimate interests: fleet and operational security, prevention of misuse and fraud, establishment or defence of claims, and IT security. Illustrative legal basis: Art. 6(1)(f) GDPR; a balancing of interests is required in actual use.

Consent: where optional purposes require consent, it is obtained separately. Consent may be withdrawn with effect for the future.

4. Recipients and service providers

Data may be transferred, to the extent necessary, to payment service providers, IT and hosting providers, roadside assistance and towing services, workshops, insurers or claims handlers, and competent authorities. In a real operation, processors would be contractually engaged in accordance with data protection requirements.

5. Transfers to third countries

This example does not provide for routine transfers of personal data to countries outside the European Economic Area. If third-country services were used in a real system, the requirements of Arts. 44 et seq. GDPR would have to be assessed separately and documented transparently.

6. Retention period

Personal data are retained only for as long as necessary for the respective purpose or while statutory retention and evidentiary obligations apply. Illustrative internal periods: abandoned reservation data up to 90 days; short-term technical data up to 30 days; claims files until settlement is completed plus any required subsequent evidentiary period. Contract and billing data subject to statutory retention are stored in accordance with the applicable rules.

7. Data subject rights

Subject to the GDPR, data subjects have in particular rights of access, rectification, erasure, restriction of processing, data portability and objection. Where processing is based on consent, consent may be withdrawn with effect for the future.

There is also a right to lodge a complaint with a competent data protection supervisory authority. In a real case, the competent authority depends in particular on the controller's registered office.

8. Requirement to provide data

Data required for identification, driving-licence checks, contract performance or billing must be provided for the conclusion and performance of a rental agreement. Without these data, vehicle rental may not be possible.

9. Automated decisions

This sample scenario does not provide for a solely automated decision producing legal or similarly significant effects within the meaning of Art. 22 GDPR. A real scoring or fraud-prevention system would have to be assessed and documented separately.

10. References

The structure of this example is based in particular on the information obligations under Art. 13 GDPR and the general lawfulness bases under Art. 6 GDPR. For productive use, the company's actual data flows, service providers, legal bases, periods and contact details must be inserted and legally reviewed.
